

Jennifer Cooper, Ed.D

Jennifer Cooper currently serves as a K-5 Principal at Chester Community Charter School. In July of 2023, she will transition into the Principal at the Center for Autism and Related Disorders. Jennifer began her educational career managing Career and Technical Education programs in the School District of Philadelphia. Jennifer continued her career working with at-risk youth, by serving as a teen parent counselor for Communities In Schools of Philadelphia and later providing treatment services for children and families at Abraxas Youth and Family Services. After making a career change, Jennifer returned to education as a Math, English and Special Education Teacher. Jennifer earned her undergraduate degree at Chestnut College, graduate degree from Saint Joseph's University, teaching certification at the University of Pennsylvania and her doctoral degree in Educational Leadership from Saint Joseph's University. Jennifer has an undeniable passion for educating and inspiring. She will continue impacting the lives of scholars, educators, and families. She is a firm believer that it truly takes a village to raise a child.
