

Britney Mumford

A born and bred Delawarean, Britney attended Caesar Rodney High in Camden before earning her Bachelor's in Political Science at East Carolina University. After college, Britney kicked off her career with various political campaigns from Pennsylvania to North Carolina. She learned quickly that her passion was building relationships and giving people the tools to change their communities and that grassroots organizing was the key to changing the world for the better. Working in various communities across the country, she has seen firsthand how a solid education can change the trajectory of someone's life.
